ECONOMICS 311: Intermediate Microeconomic Theory

PRESENTATIONS

One of the requirements of this course is that you make a presentation to the class. It does not need to be long – no more than 10 minutes – but it should be clear, crisp, and competent, and supported by visuals.

Pick a case or example from the textbook, or any topic that is relevant to the course, and prepare a presentation. You should dig a bit deeper than the textbook does, giving some background and context, as well as presenting some solid economic analysis.

Please send me your slides; if you do so before the presentation, then I'll be able to provide some feedback.

We will start the presentations with our April classes.
